Tulane School of Professional Advancement (SoPA) Media + Design students were honored at the New Orleans Ad Club's 2024 American Advertising Awards (ADDYs)

Amy Morvant, who is pursuing a Digital Design Post-Baccalaureate Certificate with a concentration in Interactive UX/UI Design, took home the night's most esteemed award—Overall Best of Show, for her MIX Website and App Dashboard design.

“The Interactive Design program has provided me opportunities to study topics beyond the scope of my daily design duties and to continue learning in a field that is always evolving,” says Amy. “There are so many students in the Digital Design program producing fantastic work, and I’m grateful to be recognized by AAF New Orleans as part of this group of dedicated students.”

Winning the local New Orleans tier of the American Advertising Awards is the first step in a prestigious three-tier, national competition. Winners from this stage progressed to the district competition, where entries competed against winners from local Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, and Tennessee Ad Club chapters. Three SoPA students won ADDYs at the district competition, and moved on to the national competition. Lisa Greene won a Gold ADDY at the national awards on May 31, 2024. The award acknowledges the highest level of creative excellence, surpassing all other entries in its category.

The mission of the American Advertising Awards is to recognize and creative excellence in the art of advertising. Winning entries included photography, animation, illustration, branding, app design, and integrated campaigns.

“On behalf of the Tulane SoPA Media + Design Program faculty, I want to congratulate all student participants and winners,” said Rebecca Carr, director of the Tulane SoPA Media + Design program. “Seeing their work, which showcases the strategy, creative thinking and innovative designs that they sharpen in the classroom makes me incredibly proud. From in class projects to those that will serve a higher purpose with service-learning partners such as Grow Dat Youth Farm, the talent and passion of our students is truly inspiring.”
